

Women IN AGRICULTURE

THE NUMBERS

As we celebrate women in agriculture, let's look at some of the facts and stats about Canada's strong, hardworking female farmers.

Did you know that women account for 29% of all farm operations in Canada?

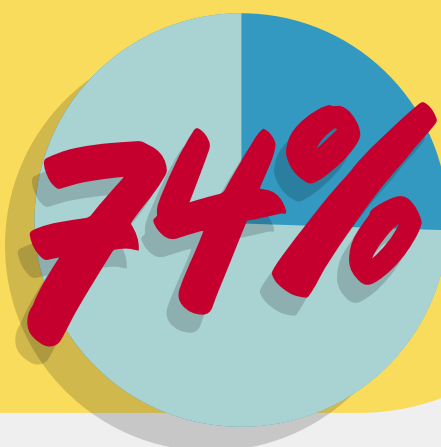

Women of all ages work in agriculture across Canada. The majority of women who own and operate farms are between the ages of 35 and 54. A great diversity of age!

More women farmers are taking agriculture-related studies than ever before! Today, 1 in 5 women farmers attend post-secondary to build on their knowledge of the agriculture industry.

Since 2019, 69% of applicants to the Chicken Farmers of Canada Young Farmers Program have been female, and that number continues to grow.

At the national office of Chicken Farmers of Canada, over 74% of the staff is female, representing the sector in animal care, food safety, trade, government relations, communications, and finance.

Chicken Farmers of Canada is proud to support women in agriculture and is working hard to keep growing these numbers!
